

I subscribed to XM Satellite Radio PRECISELY because the FTC and FCC's failure to stop anticompetitive practices has resulted in a homogenized wasteland of bland radio across the entire broadcast spectrum. Clear Channel and Viacom have made what was once a living medium of free-to-speak DJs and eclectic, local tastes in music into a bland choice of a few completely unseasoned and identical 'segments' sponsored by record companies who wish to sell their latest bland pop CDs.

YOU caused this by your inaction in controlling the homogenization of the radio market. XM provided a solution for people who wanted radio 'as it was' when American radio was something special and unique.

And now you seek to stifle even that?

Satellite radio is the future. XM and Sirius both play by the rules, and are offering the American public what they want.

Interfering in that is interference in our first amendment rights.
